

When painting the prototypes for the newest collection, I tried to explore different scales of shape with new color combinations. My earlier paintings tended to be dense and detailed, with repetitive brushstroke shapes. This spring, I challenged myself (and eventually our team) to paint larger refined shapes and add white space to compositions. The look feels a bit more modern, but still very much Moglea. These shapes also compliment the large scale halftone textures that we brought into this collection as well.

Even as our line has grown, our products are still hand painted and printed in Audubon, Iowa. Every day is such a joy at Moglea, and we thank you for letting us share our craft with you.

LETTERQUETTES

Our letterquettes and Mini Letterquettes are simple sets of stationery that are carefully hand-bound within a perfect bound booklet. They are thin, mobile and fit perfectly within a purse or tote. Each booklet has writing sheets or flat notes with matching envelopes that can easily be torn from the booklet at will. These sets were inspired by Eaton's Letterquette, a booklet of plain stationery paper that was produced in the '60's. We recreated the set with our own unique vision, as well as creating our own smaller Mini Letterquette to add to our family of stationery.

MEG'S PAINTINGS FOR THE NEWEST COLLECTION

PUTTING THE FINAL BIT OF COLOR ON OUR COLORPARTY CARD

ABOUT MOGLEA

Moglea was launched in 2012, and is under the creative direction of Chad and Meg Gleason. It's very important to us to have complete control over the quality of our products. For this reason, most everything we create is designed and letterpress printed in our Audubon, Iowa studio. We print on one Chandler and Price printing press, one Kluge Automatic foil stamping press and two Heidelberg Windmill printing presses that were all built in the 1900's. Our desire is that each piece we create have an intimate, one-of-a-kind quality by integrating techniques like collage, dip dyeing and watercolor. This is what makes our products special. We do all finishing production in house, including edge painting, envelope flap painting, padding, binding and packaging. Quality craftsmanship and flawless printing bring us joy, and we hope that Moglea will help you bring joy to others as well. — C+M

CONCERNING LETTERPRESS

Letterpress is a centuries-old printing technique in which a raised form is inked and pressed into paper. Each sheet is fed through our antique presses one color at a time. Due to the inherent nature of this process, subtle variations will occur in ink or foil coverage, color, impression and position.

PAPER

We use FSC-certified and recycled papers that allow for a rich impression on the press. Our thickest cards are printed on 4-ply mat board, chipboard or pulpboard for a tactile, substantial piece of stationery.
